The University of Illinois College of Business, The University of Illinois Research Park, SAP, and Sperry Van Ness proudly present an academic and professional Symposium focusing on how UIUC regional communities can generate more economic development activity and demand for their real estate through innovative “place-making” strategies.

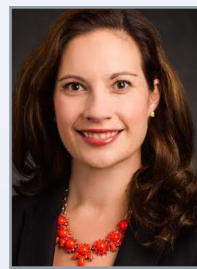

Symposium attendees will gain new perspectives on how collaborative, regional “place-making” strategies will add significant value to the existing “world class” innovation ecosystems in the UIUC region and statewide. Regional collaboration will result in more grads “choosing to live” in the area, will attract even more companies/entrepreneurs, and will deliver inclusive social and economic value to regional stakeholders from food, aviation, healthcare, manufacturing, technology, entrepreneurial and agricultural ecosystems.
